

Letter: Slow drivers are dangerous, too

<http://www.fresnobee.com/2014/03/16/3822989/slow-drivers-are-dangerous-too.html>

March 16, 2014

Can some law enforcement officer explain to me why drivers are ticketed for going 80 mph, but not 50 mph on highways 41, 168 and 180? I understand the speed limit is 65; however, we often see speeders getting tickets, but never people driving 50 or slower on the freeways.

This isn't a hard question -- 15 mph below 65 is just as dangerous as 15 mph above. There are a lot of drivers just taking a nice 40, 45, 50 mph cruise on these highways; they are oblivious to traffic.

Before my father died, I constantly tried to get him to stay off the freeways. Of course, he refused, stating that he "had a right to drive on 180 and 41." I even turned Dad into the DMV. Nothing.

Brian Bennett

Fresno