Lisa Sondergaard-Smittcamp was not compelled by her name to fight for the victims of domestic violence for the last 16 years, prosecute murderers and go on call to officer-involved shootings at 2 a.m. She could have become a career politician long ago, like her opponent. Instead, Lisa has done the extremely hard work of putting criminals away. She has worked shoulder to shoulder with law enforcement at every level, protected victims of every age, race and income level, and trained new prosecutors along the way.

Those are facts worthy of note in the election of our district attorney, no matter what her name is.
