The defeat of Majority Leader Rep. Eric Cantor in the Virginia primary should serve as a wake-up call to Rep. Devin Nunes, R-Visalia. The voters in Rep. Cantor's district showed him their disgust of his only paying attention to Washington politics and not spending enough time in his district.

Now that Rep. Nunes has been approved to represent the Republican Party in the general election, he needs to make a serious effort during Washington recesses to meet his constituents at Town Hall meetings, or one-on-ones, promising to regularly hold such events and advertise the schedule. The constituents of the congressman's district deserve to be shown that they are just as important to the congressman as his career. I hope that Rep. Nunes doesn't fall into the same trap as Rep. Cantor.
