Fresno State has joined the Clinton Global Initiative University program, giving students the opportunity to participate in the nationwide program that engages the next generation of leaders on college campuses.

Managed by the Lyles Center for Innovation and Entrepreneurship, students will develop their own Commitment to Action. The commitment is a set of specific, measurable initiatives to create solutions to solve challenges on a local or worldwide scale.

Students interested in participating can download the application at www.clintonfoundation.org, create a commitment and schedule a consultation meeting with Nelson Sebra, the entrepreneur-in-residence at the Lyles Center.

Some funding may be available to help kick-start a student's project.

CGI University was first launched in 2007 and follows the model of the Clinton Global Initiative established in 2005.
