

Renters Are Majority in Big U.S. Cities

By Laura Kusisto and Kris Hudson

American cities—and not just the priciest ones—are more and more the domain of renters.

Renters made up the majority of the population in cities at the core of nine of the nation's 11 largest metro areas in 2013, a sharp change from 2006, when renters were the majority in just five of those cities, according to a new report.

Cities have...

- Copyright ©2015 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

©2015 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved.