

A Housewarming May Be in Store

By John
Carney

Despite the arctic air blasting the central and eastern U.S., the housing market is likely to show signs of a chill rather than a deep freeze.

January was actually warmer than average for the nation as a whole, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association. Don't tell residents of Boston, but seven western states, including...