

Clovis stands tall for good planning

February 24, 2015

Good urban planning is key to the development in the central San Joaquin Valley. The citizens of Fresno County look to their leaders to manage future growth in a manner that will address quality of life issues for all of its residents.

On Feb. 21, the Clovis City Council stood firm, with a 5-0 vote, to defend the interests of their constituents against a General Plan Amendment that would have gutted the new South East Area Specific Plan. Kudos to all members of the Clovis City Council for standing up for good planning, and for the best interests of the community.
