

A Clean-Energy Breakthrough

By Fred Krupp

With the Environmental Protection Agency's Clean Power Plan now final, the era of unlimited carbon pollution from U.S. power plants is finally coming to an end. That's excellent news, because climate change has put us in the race of our lives—and the countries that move the fastest toward clean energy will be the most competitive, create the most jobs and have the healthiest air. It's a race to the top, and the Clean Power Plan gives the U.S. a better chance of winning.

Some question whether the EPA has the authority to...