

London Office Development Hits Highest Level in Seven Years

By Art
Patnaude

LONDON—Office space under construction in London is at its highest level in seven years, with developers launching more new projects after years of low activity.

More than 11 million square feet of office space is under development in central London, an 18% increase from six months ago, according to accounting firm Deloitte LLP. The level is the...

"